

Margareta Svedlund works in the International Relations Office at KTH Royal Institute of Technology and is the regional advisor for Southeast Asia since 2013. She is working with student exchange, student recruitment and partnerships between KTH and Southeast Asian universities and companies. Margareta has been working within the higher education sector for 20 years and has experience in international relations from two universities, a national agency and a private company.